International Kitchen

It would benefit all students interested in international food

The challenge is ingredients that are available worldwide

They would benefit by being able to have international food without having to worry about buying ingredients that aren't available where they live

He would be interested in this innovation because he values international exchange of culture

Users would choose what ingredients they have in their possession and then the site would show which kinds of international food they can make using their ingredients

It would collect the data of what ingredients the users have in their possessions

It would be stored in the cookies of the browsers

One concern may be that it won't protect users from possible allergens

One privacy concern would be the site storing the ingredients that the users have in their possession and potentially selling that data to advertising companies

It is the user's own responsibility to protect themselves from allergens

It will make sure the site has HTTPS

I would not store cookies on the user's computer
